Good health is as much social as it is biological.
The racial health and wealth gaps are mutually constitutive.

Housing insecurity and the poor health associated with it are central components of an unjust, destructive, and deadly racial order. Housing discrimination is a civil and economic injustice, but it is also a menace to public health.

George Lipsitz reveals how the injuries of housing discrimination are:

- Augmented by racial bias in home appraisals and tax assessments
- By the disparate racialized effects of policing, sentencing, and parole,
- By the ways in which algorithms in insurance and other spheres associate race with risk.

Also, he highlights new practices emerging in health care and the law, emphasizing how grassroots community mobilizations are creating an active and engaged public sphere constituency promoting new forms of legislation, litigation, and organization for social justice.

George Lipsitz is Research Professor Emeritus in Black Studies and Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He is co-editor of the American Crossroads series at the University of California Press and the author of THE POSSESSIVE INVESTMENT IN WHITENESS and HOW RACISM TAKES PLACE among other books. He works closely with fair housing councils and with Free-Dem Foundations in New Orleans and with Building Healthy Communities in Boyle Heights in Los Angeles.
